

The Road Not Taken!

Warm-up

We can't possibly live a solitary life. Life without our family, friends, acquaintances is unimaginable. Interconnected with each other, we always find new inspirations for stories from the slices of life of everybody that we interact with.

Writing Exercise

A parallel universe is a hypothetical self-contained reality co-existing with one's own. Going by that definition, while every decision we have taken has shaped our life as it, every crossroad we've found ourselves at, has given birth to one/more parallel universe(s).

Today let's imagine each others' parallel realities. Making the person whose name you picked the chit of, your protagonist, weave a tale of an alternate reality of their life.

Now that's fairly simple, and what fun is a parallel universe without collision? Now make your protagonist and the real person cross paths in a chance encounter. How would your protagonist react? Will he regret missing out on the alternate reality or will he be glad he chose the road he did? Unleash your imagination and let us know!

Reality check

Since this session's stories are based on our lives, let the real counterpart of your protagonist give the first comment on your story. Let them tell how close to their reality your story was, or how vicarious the alternate reality you created for them, is!

Happy Writing! :)
